

On a Road to Somewhere Else

A blind dog barking
At an empty tree

A night so black
The waves lose their way to the shore

The friend gone on alone
Needlessly so, perhaps

On a road to somewhere else
Where the dry earth has risen

A caravan of dust
Making for a windy prairie

Text

Published in The New Republic, 1999